

Pamela Oas Williams
Co-Founder, Stand Up To Cancer

Pamela Oas Williams has built an acclaimed body of work across film, television, and philanthropy. She produced multi-award-nominated feature films Lee Daniels' The Butler and The United States vs Billie Holiday. Williams partnered with Laura Ziskin in 2001 overseeing a slate of film and television projects, including the 74th and 79th Academy Awards and the three-part Ken Burns series based on the Pulitzer Prize winning book Cancer: The Emperor of All Maladies. Prior to partnering with Ziskin, Williams ran George Clooney's television company, Maysville Television, and was a producer on The Fresh Prince of Bel Air.

Williams is the executive producer of SU2C's multi-network "roadblock" televised fundraising specials. She also wrote and produced SU2C's "Change the Odds" public service announcement. When Ziskin was diagnosed with cancer, Williams worked with her to initiate a rallying cry to unite all those affected by cancer to demand an answer to the disease. She will continue to carry on Ziskin's vision until the day when cancer is no more.
